

A Sky full of Vultures: story of a Jay

Imagine if every man was given a torch when created by the Almighty, but given that torch with a condition "you can't lose it or else you fail in life". Then Jay a young man who was given two torches by the Almighty fell in love with a lady unknown to him who was heartless and so she played with him and his emotions used him the way she wants, And so he only begged her and he pleads "take it easy on my heart please, I will die, I will die" and so the lady says "you selfish Jay all I want is two torches for me and my best friend Pete" and then Jay says "please I will do anything just take it easy on me" and so Jay gave her his torches just so she can finally love him but the lady didn't neither did she stop tormenting him and then she asked for his brain but Jay was willing to give her his heart but she refused saying "eww what am I going to do with your wasteful heart give me your bright brains" then Jay says " please save my dying soul" but she refused, then Jay ran to desert and then stabbed a knife straight to his brain and then begged the skies for vultures to eat his brains before he dies that was his last request he doesn't want the lady to steal his brains, so the skies and God of love granted his dying wish and so the vultures ate his brains but all of the vultures were in pain and heartbroken because of Jay but Jay's soul was happy because without his brain the torches were useless and the lady will be declared a thief in the eye of the Almighty and she was dealt with and given a punishment.

The End
