

HOW DOES HE CROSS....

There once lived two brothers named Tommy and Danny who lived in a small town called Santosi. They were the only children of their parents and did almost everything together. Fast forward, they grew up losing both parents and was left to cater for themselves. Danny got severely sick one day. He was taken to hospitals, churches, and the likes but nothing seemed working. They finally found themselves with a native doctor who demanded some stuffs before he could heal Danny. The things were, a live Crocodile, a live Hen, and a Bag of Corn. Because Tommy loved his brother so much, he tried and got all the things, but the problem now was that, before getting to the native doctor's shrine, there was a river and the boat available was only able to carry 3 people or things at a time. Danny is at the shrine already so now the boat can carry the boat driver, Tommy and either one of the stuffs.

Mind you, leaving the hen and the crocodile to go and place the maize at the other bank of the river and returning will make the crocodile eat the hen by the time he arrives. Leaving the maize and the hen, will also make the hen eat the maize by the time he arrives.

So now, HOW DOES HE CROSS.....
